FOOD EVENT INTRODUCES FILIPINO DISHES TO NEW YORK CITY FOODIES

NEW YORK FOODIES TROOPED to the Philippine Centre's Kalayaan Hall for some great Philippine foods prepared by Filipino chefs and restaurateurs in the city like Miguel Trinidad of Maharlika and Norman Dalager of Masarap. A brainchild of the Philippine Trade and Investment Representative MICHELLE SANCHEZ, then-Consul to the United States ELENA MANINGAT and the entrepreneur AGNES JAMORA, the event, titled Inuman at Pulutan (Drinks and Tapas), was mounted by the Philippine American Chamber of Commerce and sponsored by EXL, a NASDAQ-listed firm in transformation and outsourcing. PACC

President BUTCH MEILY said they had to turn away people as the venue reached maximum capacity. Dishes that thrilled the New Yorkers, some of whom tasted Filipino food for the first time, included grilled pork belly adobo, longganisa on a hotdog bun with bagoong mayo and achara and dinuguan-style meatballs on grilled pan de sal. Some of the drinks offered were Vuqo Premium Vodka, distilled from young Philippine coconut; Haliya Light Fruit Wines, all-natural, handcrafted from Philippine fruits; and San Miguel Beer.
